

Fitch ratifies its long-term "A-" rating for Enagás

- The company's long-term rating is two notches higher than Fitch's sovereign rating for Spain.

The rating agency Fitch has reaffirmed its long-term "A-" rating (with a negative outlook) and its "F2" short-term IDR for Enagás S.A. The company's senior debt has also been assigned an "A-" rating.

The agency has also assigned an "A-" rating for the long-term IDR and senior debt of the company's subsidiary Enagás Transporte S.A.U.

The company's long-term rating is two notches higher than Fitch's sovereign rating for Spain.

The current ratings of A- from Fitch and BBB from Standard and Poor's underline the status of Enagás as one of the most secure and solvent companies in the energy sector.
