

Enagás, first Ibex 35 energy company to certify its risk management system with AENOR

Madrid, 22 December 2025. Enagás is the first Ibex 35 energy company to achieve UNE-ISO 31000:2018 certification in Risk Management, awarded by AENOR, after passing an exhaustive audit process. This milestone reflects Enagás' commitment to excellence and continuous improvement in corporate risk management, as well as reinforcing the solidity and maturity of the company's management model.

The audit concludes that Enagás complies with the principles, processes and best practices in corporate risk management, and highlights the transparency of the model and its alignment with the company's Strategic Plan. Enagás has a specific risk map, associated with its Strategic Plan, which includes an analysis of emerging threats in the energy sector and the socio-economic context. Furthermore, AENOR's audit gave a positive assessment of Enagás's culture of continuous improvement in its Risk Management model.

In the words of Enagás' CEO, Arturo Gonzalo Aizpiri, "for the company, achieving this certification is recognition of the company's long-term commitment to corporate risk management, an essential task that provides greater certainty and clarity in the successful achievement of strategic objectives".

Meanwhile, the CEO of AENOR, Rafael García Meiro, emphasised that "AENOR's UNE-ISO 31000 certification, obtained by Enagás, is a turning point in strategic risk management in the energy sector. This achievement demonstrates how the adoption of international standards strengthens corporate resilience and brings transparency in decision-making. Thanks to this certification, organisations like Enagás can anticipate complex scenarios, integrating risk management as an essential pillar for sustainability and market confidence".
